DAN the man

From Down Under to the Big Apple, Daniel Merriweather's talent and perseverance are taking him places and getting him noticed.

There's something special about Australian singer Daniel Merriweather. It could be the combination of his husky, soulful voice and boyish charm. Or that at only 27, he has toured with pop superstars like Justin Timberlake and Kanye West while releasing a debut album that peaked at No. 2 in the UK charts.

Despite his appeal and success, life wasn't always a bed of roses for Merriweather. He lived with his family in a blue-collar area in Melbourne and even worked at a fast food joint for extra pocket money. "I lived in a town at the end of a train line on the edge of a forest – childhood was about getting by. It was a humble sort of lifestyle," he recounts.

To his credit, Merriweather stuck to his passion for music – which was ignited when he started playing the violin at four years old and singing for as long as he can remember. His talent attracted the attention of Marlin, an indie record label which signed him up, but it was simply a stepping stone to something larger.

The demo tracks recorded during his time with Marlin made its way to music producer Mark Ronson, who liked what he heard. This prompted Merriweather to swap laidback Melbourne for the manic energy of New York, a move which paid off handsomely. Despite many delays, which include an unscheduled break to recover from a polyp found on Merriweather's vocal chord, the Aussie singer finally released his debut album, Love & War, in June 2009.

Filled with catchy, upbeat hit tracks like 'Change' and 'Impossible', as well as heartfelt ballads like 'Water And A Flame', featuring British singer Adele, the album breaks through stereotypes. "I wanted to let go of genres and make an album of songs played by good people. I wanted it to be a natural one, to innocently, maybe naïvely, find its own place." One thing's for sure, Merriweather and his music have found its way into the hearts of many music lovers.
