Our pick of the best music playing on board in March

Angélique Kidjo – Djin Djin

When a bell rings to welcome a morning in Africa, Djin Djin is the sound it makes. It's also the recording that won Angélique Kidjo a Grammy for Best Contemporary World Music Album in 2007. If she has only begun to find mainstream acclaim recently, it is not through lack of persistence. Angélique was performing on national radio when she was just a teenager, and self-produced her first album Pretty before the political troubles in Benin forced her to relocate to Paris in 1983. It was here she took the number one spot with another album, Logozo, in 1991. Collaborations with Peter Gabriel, Carlos Santana, Dave Matthews and Herbie Hancock were to follow, along with eight albums and performances around the globe – everywhere from the Royal Albert Hall to Carnegie Hall, the Nobel Peace Prize Concert to Barack Obama's Inauguration Ball. Listeners who mine Angélique's back catalogue will unearth many enlightening treasures of Afro-beat and rock fusion, yet many claim her talents have surfaced at their best on Djin Djin. Listen to Djin Djin on selected flights now

Katherine Jenkins – Believe

If you were a tourist boarding the London Eye 10 years ago, you may already have met Katherine Jenkins. Unbelievably, this young tour guide was soon to become the fastest-selling mezzo-soprano opera singer of all time with her first album Premiere. Now, seven albums, four million sales and countless other broken records later, she is undoubtedly one of the most successful crossover classical stars in our universe. Her latest album Believe features collaborations with Italian tenor Andrea Bocelli alongside covers including Evanescence's Bring Me To Life, marking a movement away from her early repertoire of hymns and arias. Nowadays, you are just as likely to hear Jenkins perform Leonard Cohen's Hallelujah, as she makes the move into popular culture, even appearing on reality TV shows. Tune into Believe on selected flights now

Muse – The Resistance

Playing Rachmaninoff interludes during their panoramic rock anthems, and extravagant operatic rock songs as often as electronica tracks, Muse are the definition of a genre-blending band. It is to their credit that their latest LP The Resistance, a sci-fi concept album about a boy-girl romance in an oppressive Orwellian setting, has found acclaim across the board, with NME calling it, 'deliriously unhinged, shamelessly grandiose and, best of all, superb'. Over-the-top has worked for the band before and now The Resistance has blasted rock theatre into the stratosphere, with three tracks on the album – named Exogenesis: Symphony Parts One, Two and Three – amounting to a 13-minute symphony. However, this pretension indicates good old-fashioned British humour, not another too-cool-for-school band trying to be different – a point hammered home with melodies as close to the soundtrack of Doctor Who as is possible without becoming a parody. The Resistance* is playing on selected flights now

Joss Stone – Colour Me Free!

Jocelyn Stoker's rise to fame began when she won first prize in a BBC singing competition in 2001 at the age of 14. Suddenly, she had a new last name, a record deal and permission to drop out of school. Now, with 10 million album sales and a string of awards under her belt, soul queen Stone has spread her creative wings on her recently released fourth album, Colour Me Free! Hear Colour Me Free! on selected flights now. Joss Stone is also the featured artist on the Chart Toppers radio channel this month.
