Malaysian indie electronic duo PASTEL LITE's debut album Balada is playing onboard this month. We catch up with band members Eff Hakim and Mohd Faliq on what to expect and the inspiration behind the album.

Tell us more about how you got involved in music.

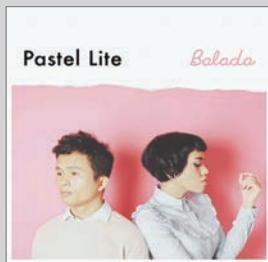

We've always been into making music ever since we could remember. While we didn't get a formal music education, we did go to audio school, where we learned the basics of audio production, music theories and such. We went on to record our own music and this gave us room to experiment with our sound, which in turn led to a lot of learning and practising, which is always good for any band.

How did Pastel Lite come about?

An online friend introduced us. At that time, Faliq, our multi-instrumental, was looking for talents to work with for a project, while Eff, the vocalist, had just posted a bunch of her demos online. We met up in real life, started working together to make music, and there was just this really good chemistry between us. After we released our first song online, we were invited to play at a festival in Singapore. Surely it's too late to change our minds now, we thought, so we stuck to the band thing and called ourselves Pastel Lite to reflect the vibe of our first song, which was minimal electronic pop music.

Your latest album, Balada, has a strong 80s feel and theme to it. Could you tell us why?

We were opting for a late 70s and early 80s vibe, which we think is the era where band pop music was at its peak. Why we resonated so much with that decade during the making of Balada has a lot to do with wanting to pay tribute to Eff's late father, who grew up in that era, (and) our newfound appreciation for international classic bands like ABBA, The Carpenters, Bee Gees, Todd Rundgren as well as local legends such as Alleycats, Uji

Rashid, Sudirman, Kenny Remy Martin and Francissca Peter.

To be perfectly honest, however, we never truly planned to have this specific sound in this album; it just happened. Once the theme became apparent, we just went with the flow. It helped that prior to our album, we went through a 'new wave' phase. It's nice to go back to the classics for a change, and we guess it showed in the album.

Where do you draw inspiration from for your music and lyrics?

Anything, really! We understand it's a cliché answer a lot of musicians like to give, but it's true. During the making of our album, we were inspired by so many things: the death of a loved one, adulthood, unrequited love, graduation, financial issues, friendship, cats, the end of the world, the concept of fame, arguments, our local indie music industry.

What is the most memorable or exciting experience that playing as a band has taken you to?

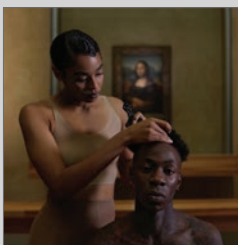

If we were to pick one, it'd be the 2015 Laneway Festival in Singapore. It was one of those events where we were literally surrounded by all of our favourite bands and musicians like Little Dragon, St Vincent and Mac DeMarco, just to name a few. It was so surreal; it felt like a dream to see your heroes in person.

What's next for Pastel Lite?

We're working on a few songs. Well, we're always working on a few songs! Fingers crossed that we'll be able to release some new music sooner rather than later.

Everything Is Love - THE CARTERS

Plans to record a joint album by Beyoncé and Jay-Z have finally come into fruition in the form of this rap and hip-hop focused record. Everything Is Love is the final album in a trilogy documenting the couple's married life after Beyoncé's explosive revelation of her husband's infidelity on Lemonade and Jay-Z's repentance on 4:44. The album marks the pair's first full-length collaboration but hopefully not the last.
