↑ THE LION KING

For me, The Lion King is the perfect movie to watch on a flight, because I really wanted to see it, but what with birthdays and weddings, I just couldn't make it to the cinema when it was on. And now, I can watch it on a flight. With even better photo-realistic computer animation than Disney's recent Jungle Book (also helmed by white-hot director Jon Favreau), with a stellar cast including James Earl Jones, Beyoncé, Seth Rogen, John Oliver and Donald Glover, and with an enormous budget of USD260 million, this new Lion King promises much. Grossing USD1.6 billion, it has become the most successful animated movie of all time (Frozen had to let it go), but does it match the 1994 original?

Not only is the animation astonishing, it suggests that ever-evolving computer animation is going to reach unbelievable heights, and very soon. It paints the landscape with the realism of a nature documentary while also carrying the artistry of the dazzling Broadway version. Chiwetel Ejiofor as Scar is a revelation, and with a voice like that, he would have my vote as the new Lion King.

Both the old and the new Lion King are not my favourite Disney musicals (Little Mermaid for me). I just can't understand why these aggressive carnivores never eat anything, not even snacking on an impala. But that musical might be a bit too terrifying for kids. So apart from that, The Lion King is the perfect movie for a flight

↑ THE ART OF RACING IN THE RAIN

I really didn't think I was going to like this film. It has a talking dog, which is always a disaster because, well, pets can't actually talk. The beauty of pets is that they are not human, they are something better than that, and yet, no matter how much we love them and miss them when they are gone, they're also not nearly as bright as we imagine them to be. Pets live in the moment; they don't dwell on the past or think about the distant future. My pets had dignity, playfulness and gave unwavering companionship. I want to see that, so I didn't think I'd like a movie about a talking dog. And yet, as soon as Kevin Costner's voice-over began as the elderly dog Enzo, I was utterly gripped and moved, remembering my pets, my life, and I really needed to scratch my cat.

The Art Of Racing In The Rain is a simple tale of a young race car driver, his career, his loves and deep tragedy, all spent with his dog Enzo. Without his dog, this young man's life would be yet another anonymous domestic drama, but for his dog (as these things are for all our pets) this is the only story in the world because these are the only lives that matter.

We never see him, but this movie is all about Kevin Costner. His sage-like voice-over imbues the dog Enzo with an incongruous humanity but also with a dog's true nature of living in the moment, like a race car driver who concentrates purely on the turn ahead. Costner's voice make this dog's old soul believable and dignified. If you've ever had and lost a pet, then you will enjoy The Art Of Racing In The Rain.

↑ SHAFT

Samuel L. Jackson has played the character of Shaft before, but the original was Richard Roundtree who played the leather-coated New York private detective in a series of films in the 1970s. Shaft was the most famous of a genre of movies called 'blacksploitation', which offered black heroes, both male and female, who were unapologetically black for a mainly black audience. Shaft became successful with a wider audience because the hero was so cool and because the theme song is possibly the greatest theme song ever. It's hard to imagine where Quentin Tarantino would find any inspiration if Shaft didn't exist.

For the remakes of Shaft, there could only have been Samuel L. Jackson in the title role, but his first outing was silly, loud and pointless, with the movie striving too hard to be cool without investing in creating interesting characters. But this new Shaft is funny and exciting, with more up-to-date sensitivities without striving to be too cool (I don't think anybody walks away from an explosion in slow motion).

In this new Shaft, the great detective is suddenly reunited with his FBI son whom he hasn't seen since he was a baby. And then later, we add another generation of Shafts with the return of the original, Richard Roundtree. It's the kind of movie where the plot is not very important, where the bad guys never seem to be able to shoot straight, but the good guys do. Basically, the movie is just that – great fun.

The Lion King, The Art Of Racing In The Rain and Shaft are playing onboard. Check your in-flight entertainment system for channel information.

Two Sisters is playing onboard. Check the movie section in your in-flight entertainment system for channel information.

In Two Sisters, Mei Yue (right) is discharged from a psychiatric hospital into the custody of her older sister Mei Xi, and the two move back into their once-abandoned family home. But when Mei Yue starts seeing unexplained eerie apparitions, dark secrets from the family's past start to emerge. This month, Going Places speaks to actress Lim Mei Fen who plays Mei Yue, and writer/director James Lee on the film's production.

LIM MEI FEN

Your character Mei Yue is pretty different from your real-life personality.

What did you have to do to really bring out the character?

Indeed, we are very different. The director and I worked together to build a solid backstory for the character, which I think of as the 'soul'. A week prior to filming, I 'wore' Mei Yue's soul and explored her world, both in rehearsals and in my daily life. That helped me to tap into her world and enabled me to deliver more genuine emotions from the character. I could feel her emotions, her fear, her dilemma and her struggles. You could say that my body was just a vessel for her 'soul' when the camera was rolling.

What was it like working with director James Lee, executive producer Amir Muhammad and the rest of the team?

James and Amir have both been my idols since my secondary school years. I am more than honoured to be able to work with them. It was a dream come true for me. Even though it's not a huge team, it worked well for the scale of this film. I also liked how James gave some degree of creative freedom to the team. Everyone, including the actors, got to voice out new ideas. As a director who knows precisely what he wants, James will then pick the ideas that work the best with his vision. I am beyond grateful to have been a part of this amazing production.

JAMES LEE

What gave you the idea for the plot of Two Sisters?

The idea was inspired by an article on the Internet regarding the psychiatric condition of a twin sister, where she kept confusing her own identity as that of the other twin sister. From there, I came up with the idea of using it to create a plot for the movie infused with supernatural thriller elements.

Did the cast and crew succeed in bringing your vision of the story to life?

Yes, the team worked very hard in such a limited timeframe to bring this story to life. Both actresses managed to take an in-depth approach to the development of their characters even though we had a short period of time to rehearse. They had great chemistry with each other and managed to convincingly portray the relationship between the two sisters, Mei Yue and Mei Xi.

What is the take-home message that you wished to convey to your audience through this movie?

In the end, this movie is about the consequences of the terrible deeds carried out by humans, leading to the horrific aftermath that eventually affects the next generation. The things that are scary are not ghosts or the supernatural but the actions of the living – the things that abusive people do to others. ■
